

Saloni Shah

Saloni Shah is a fourth-year medical student at Sidney Kimmel Medical College at Thomas Jefferson University. Saloni completed her undergraduate studies at Northeastern University, where she majored in Biology. Prior to matriculating to medical school, she spent a year performing clinical dermatology research in the lab of Dr. Joel Gelfand and Dr. David Margolis in the Department of Dermatology at the University of Pennsylvania. Under the mentorship of Dr. Joy Wan, she intends to pursue a career in pediatric dermatology. Her long-term career goal is to understand the broader systemic effects of chronic dermatologic disease. Ultimately, she hopes that her clinical interests in pediatric dermatology guide her research questions and, conversely, aims for her research to inform the care of her future patients.